Team

Dedication. Determination. Discipline.

These are the three pillars that support Legacy International and the core strengths and virtues that each one of our team members brings to every project we work on.

Philip Jalufka, President

Philip Jalufka serves as President of Legacy International, a residential sales and marketing operation that has partnered with the Cushman & Wakefield team.

For nearly a decade, Mr. Jalufka has worked to build an impressive list of accomplishments in the areas of real estate development, implementation, and overall execution of sales and marketing strategies. His company, Legacy International, currently services master-planned resorts in the Continental United States, Mexico, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, and the Bahamas.

Previously, while serving for more than four years as Vice President, Sales & Marketing with the Central Division of Centex Destination Properties, Jalufka successfully exceeded the annual operating requirements for two master-planned resort communities and one luxury condominium tower project and was awarded 2005 and 2006 Division Sales Manager of the Year for his national business unit. In addition, he recruited and motivated three award-winning project sales organizations, authorized 56 team members, including 22 sales executives.

Other impressive facets to Jalufka's real estate background include having designed a comprehensive sales training and coaching program for all sales and sales management personnel of which one of his three resort sales managers was named 2006 Sales Manager of the Year. He developed pricing and release strategies, proformas, absorption rates and cooperating brokerage programs for land, condominium and single-family home sales, totaling almost 500 units per year; exceeding annual revenue and earnings targets while directing an unprecedented sales volume in excess of $405 million. Jalufka's team held the number one position at Centex Destination Properties for customer satisfaction and a top ten position in the entire company for earnings.

From 2001-2003, Jalufka was Director of Sales and Marketing for Playground Destination Properties with the Southeast Region, where he directed strategy planning and implementation to achieve proforma requirements for a specific community. He was responsible for client relationships, sales team training, information technology, developer and public relations, and overall sales efforts associated with a 2,800-acre master-planned golf course development.

He recruited and motivated a team of ten, including six sales specialists. He exceeded annual revenue and sales targets, directing an unprecedented land sales volume of $11,116,598, and achieved a 44% increase in the average sales price per unit in the first year of sales operations. Other responsibilities included the coordination of the sales and marketing efforts associated with a $56 million land acquisition and project joint venture, and business development with several Caribbean and Mexico sites.

Prior to his work in real estate, Jalufka proudly served his country as a commissioned, special operations aviation officer in the US Army. He holds Bachelor degrees in Economics and Political Science from the United States Military Academy at West Point and received his MBA from Embry Riddle University. Currently, he resides in Austin, Texas, and is married with two children.

Clay Knight, Strategic Marketing Partner

Clay attended Texas Tech where he was a Design Communications major. During this time, he studied fine arts in Florence and design in London. Clay's inherent entrepreneurial abilities were first put to use at a software start-up in Austin, Texas, beginning in 2001, when Clay and five others built Whole Security, a company that developed the Internet security industry's first behavioral-based detection module for malicious threats. Whole Security eventually employed more than 85 people before being acquired by Symantec in 2005.

Clay wore a variety of hats during this experience, and was extremely instrumental in developing the Whole Security product brand, which ultimately legitimized their ground-breaking tool that companies such as Ebay and Bank of America soon put to use.

Clay believes technology, industry knowledge and good design can all peacefully co-exist, and that these are the key elements that afford opportunities for creative breakthroughs in communication today. His business philosophy is in sync with his approach to design – both are refreshingly simple yet always innovative.

Clay wanted to start a different kind of ad agency – one that incorporated technology seamlessly into a brand. Not something that was outsourced somewhere, never quite clicking with other communications. He co-founded dib creative in March of 2007 to build such an agency; one that had web and technology in its DNA combined with strong traditional advertising capabilities to create a new breed of agency.
